2. The attached proposals are intended to accomplish the following results:

b. The revision of the 146.7 account description and the establishment of the newly proposed 146.9 account are intended to accomplish the segregation of true Imprest (Petty Cash) Funds from other revolving fund type accountings; for example, those used for the procurement and maintenance of material and safehouses, for the administration of small training sites, and for operational type expenditures. A few of these miscellaneous revolving funds can be properly placed in other existing or proposed accounts (e.g., the new 141 account or the 144.1 or 144.2 accounts); however, a new advance account is considered more appropriate for most of these funds. The absence of an appropriate "catch all" account has necessitated the charging of many advances which are not true Imprest Fund type advances to the present 146.7 account. The establishment of the 146.9 account will place our advance accounts in their proper perspective and will permit a more careful and orderly review of the true Imprest Fund Account. Upon establishment of the 146.9 account, the 146.1 account should be eliminated and the activities now recorded therein should be transferred to the 146.9 account.
